

Yelena Korotkaya

Dr. Yelena Korotkaya is an obstetrician/gynecologist who is currently pursuing a fellowship in Family Planning in the department of Obstetrics and Gynecology at UCLA. She graduated from Magna Cum Laude from the Macaulay Honors College at Hunter College in New York City. She then went on to complete her medical degree at the SUNY Downstate School of Medicine in Brooklyn, NY. She then completed her OB-GYN residency at the Northwell Health System at North Shore/LIJ on Long Island in NY.

As a family planning fellow, she is excited to pursue a master's in public health. She hopes to expand her knowledge in order to better promote women's health. She is excited to develop skills in this program that will allow her to better advocate for her patient's health. She is very interested in reproductive choice, contraception and patient education.

Dr. Korotkaya speaks English and Russian fluently. As a recent transplant from NY, she is enjoying all the consistent sunshine. She enjoys traveling, eating out and exploring all the wonderful hiking that California has to offer.
